Offenses against Children

Generally speaking, any sexual activity with a minor (under the age of 18) is considered a sex offense because, under State law, minors aren't seen as being able to consent to sexual activity. Those engaging in sexual activity with a minor face stiff penalties upon conviction. Any sexual conduction with a child under the age of 13 faces very harsh penalties because they are not able to consent to anything sexual in nature under the Utah State Law. A person who commits sexual offenses against children and possesses a position of special trust over the child enhances the charges.

Child Sexual Abuse

If you know a child under the age of 18 who is being touched in an inappropriate or sexual manner by a parent or caretaker, or if your child discloses any sexual or physical abuse:

- Call 911, your local law enforcement agency, the Utah Child Abuse Hotline (1-800-678-9399) or the National Child Abuse Hotline (1-800-4ACHILD).
- Insist on a medical evaluation at McKay Dee Hospital.
- Document the information your child discloses, but don't question your child about the specific details of the abuse.
- Request that your child be interviewed at a Children's Justice Center.
